

Jonathon Rice, 2014 Picou Fellowship Recipient

Jonathon received his Bachelor of Science degree from Northern Arizona University with a double major in geology and environmental sciences. Because of the economic downturn of 2008, he stayed in school and began to become interested in research-oriented projects. In addition, he became more interested in studies that investigate surficial geologic processes and sea-level change. As a result, he is now working on a Masters in geology under Dr. Alex Simms at the University of California, Santa Barbara. He is working on a facies interpretation of the Nueces Bay-Head Delta, Texas.
